

Moderately The Reasonable Request set by D. H. Kingdon

but Nature ne'er design'd to see,
When she such skill employ'd;
These beauties are not to possess,
But gave to be enjoy'd;
Then let your dimpled smiles witness
Complacency of mind,
And every soft desire express,
And as your fair be kind.

Then you replete with envy grace
Will show how you despise,
The little Arts Coquets embrace
To catch unguarded Eyes;
So may you with justice claim,
The loss they must deplore,
And let unskillful manners gentlest fame
When beauty is no more.
